

Abstract

A zipper head structure comprises a pull tab, a base and a universal joint. The base has a receiving space for receiving a zipper chain scoop. The universal joint is connected between the pull tab and the base. Through the 5 design of the universal joint, the pull tab can rotate for 360 degrees to match the motion of the zipper, hence providing the most appropriate and labor-saving angle.